Spirit of Art in Vienna

International Art Exhibition 18-24 July 2012

Moya - Museum of Young Art Palais Schönborn Vienna

The Moya – Museum of Young Art – is delighted to host the "Spirit of Art", an exhibition dedicated to multilaterality in young art.

We are very pleased to welcome the international artists who live and work in so many different parts of the world, and who are united here in Vienna by the exhibition and by the spirit of art.

Art can create an atmosphere of freedom, open dialogue and communication that plays such an important role for humanity and for our coexistence with all the challenges that brings.

The exhibition emphasises individuality in art, as it shows a wide variety of different concepts, processes and approaches. Conceptually speaking, it consciously lacks actively crafted, fluent transitions between individual artists statements; in so doing, it seeks to stimulate debate so that visitors can identify these transitions for themselves. It is hoped that the exhibition will provide food for thought about similarities and differences in international views, and about common and varying aims and ways of expression. The question of individuality and the possibility of its existence as such, as well as the question of regionality and its role in the context of our globalised world, are all themes which will be addressed and felt in the context of the exhibition, which also touches upon major issues of our time.

We trust that the Spirit of Art will stimulate a refreshing exchange of views, and will make its own contribution to peaceful coexistence.

Once upon a time I had a dream to organize an International Art Exhibition at The Moya Museum of Young Art Palais Schonborn Vienna. After years that dream has become a reality.

Spirit of Art –International Art exhibition arrives in Vienna.

The exhibition is one of a series showing in major cities across Europe. The exhibition is open to the public 18-24 July 2012 at the pictorial antique palace - Palais Schonborn, home to The Moya - Museum of Young Art, located in the cultural heart of Vienna.

The exhibition will host 60 established artists displaying carefully selected paintings, sculptures, tapestries and digital photography artworks. The contrast between the ancient Palais, its Art Nouveau rooms and furniture, a long side the modern art exhibited, is interesting and breathtaking. Each exhibition hall has its particular style and I selected the artwork to relate and complete the design of the halls. Artists from over 20 countries and three continents will be exhibiting: USA, Canada, Australia, Austria, Croatia, Germany, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Mexico, Republica of Moldova, Norway, Serbia, Poland, New Zealand, Spain, Sweden, The Netherlands, Turkey, and Belgium are being represented by artists well known within their own countries and worldwide.

Many of the artists have been awarded international art prizes, and have participated in numerous exhibitions.

Their works can be found in fine private art collections and museums around the world.

Each artist brings their own unique culture, history, motives, personal style and individual perspective to art and to life. Their preferences, interpretations, techniques and representation of their own personal reality are explored and expressed utilizing the diverse, interesting and unique forms of the visual language of art. This spirit invests the exhibition with a soul that connects many different cultures and attitudes, reminding us how art is a universal language and continues to unite people through the ages.

The visitors will be exposed to a rich kaleidoscope of colors, shapes and techniques united in this exhibition space to create an exceptional experience. I produced and curated this series of exhibitions to expose the differences in artistic perspective of different cultures. It is amazing, surprising, and rewarding, to see how artists from all over the world find a mutual and global language in the visual arts. This series is so very special, unique and charming because of the juxtaposition of abstraction and realism. This international collection shows that art has no borders and suffers no limitations. It is the visual voice of peace and hope for a united peaceful world society.

I hope that this event will echo and resonate like the last exhibition in London and will be the beginning of new friendships and links between different cultures, people and artists.

Special thanks to the Director of Moya Museum Dr Kolja Kramer. My warm thanks go to all the artists who have given the best of themselves for this exhibition.

Enjoy it!
